

ANIMATOR ADJUDICUM

In our efforts to produce the best product possible, we worked on both Animator and Images right up until it was time to ship, adding and improving features. Some of these changes were made after the manuals had gone to press. Here is a list of those changes to Animator:

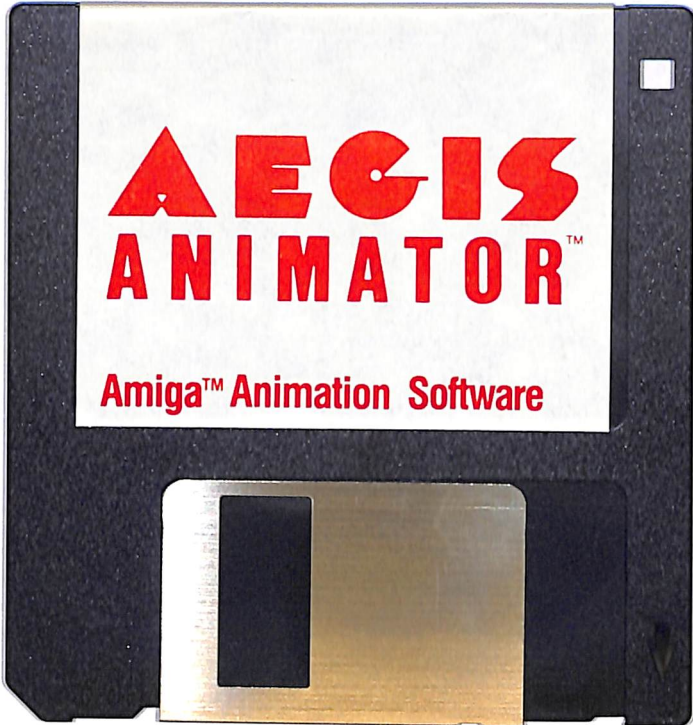

Glow On/Off - This command has been added to the Color Requestor. The color in the last well of the color palette pulses from green to purple and back. This is the normal setting when Animator first boots. Any objects made with this color will pulse. This can be turned off by using the Glow On/Off switch located in the Color Requestor.

Ani -r filename - This command is detailed in the "Shortcuts" chapter near the end of Inside Legis Animator. The command has been altered to loop the animation until interrupted, rather than exiting back to the CLI as described in the book.

Storyboard and Paint Program Images - The program will now display windows loaded in from other paint programs while in Storyboard. The manual states otherwise on page 68. Backdrops are still wiped from memory to provide you with as much memory space as possible to work in.

Cut - Please note that using the Cut function in the Storyboard is destructive. It cuts from the source animation and will delete any animation it is pasted on to. If you wish to take a piece of animation from one storyboard and add it to another, use the Splice function instead. There is no Undo function in the Storyboard so be careful.

Default - It has come to our attention that the word "default" is not defined, though there is extensive use of it in the manuals. Default refers to the start up state of a tool or function. In other words, when Animator first starts up, there is a default color palette. This is the color palette that will always appear when Animator first starts.
